JOURNAL OF LAND AND DEVELOPMENT

VOLUME 5

SPRING 2016

NUMBER 2

The University of Baltimore School of Law's Journal of Land and Development is one of few journals that specializes in property and environmental law. The Journal is published electronically on the UB Law School Library website, along with major electronic sources such as LexisNexis, Westlaw and HeinOnline. To subscribe to the journal free of charge simply email JLD@ubalt.edu. In addition, all current and past articles are available free of charge at <http://scholarworks.law.ubalt.edu/ubjld/>.

Consequently, the Journal reaches a wide audience and is read by a number of legal professionals. The Journal's publications are widely viewed and cited by some of the most important legal resources.

The Journal is extremely flexible with regards to the length and format of the articles chosen for publication. The Journal's priority and focus is to publish quality articles that appeal to our many readers throughout the legal community. Thus, we accept articles that range from just a few pages to articles that are quite lengthy. Any article covering developments in areas of property, land use, construction, urban development, environmental law and related fields will be considered. Unlike other competing journals that may be strictly regulated by their length or format requirements, this allows us the flexibility to publish well-written articles that would otherwise be disqualified merely due to length or format. Our selection process is based solely on the quality of the submission.

The Journal only accepts articles from legal professionals. The Journal will not consider articles written by law students because our staff editors receive priority consideration for publication of student articles.

Please feel free to submit articles and a current resume via email to JLD@ubalt.edu. Articles submitted for consideration are encouraged to be submitted in .doc file format.

Sincerely,

Gregory A. Franklin
